AMC Nears Completion of State of the Art Research Laboratory

Albania (WHN) Immediately following the founding of the Albany Medical College 154 years ago, laboratories were built to facilitate medical research in to the diseases afflicting society (cowpox, smallpox, plague, dysentery, government). To this day, these very same laboratories are being used to pursue the ills of today's world (in-grown toenail, lung cancer, AIDS, dysentery, government). However, in preparation for the 21st Century, Albany Medical College has initiated the construction of a new state of the art research laboratory (see photo, below right). The recipient of this futuristic laboratory is Dr. Mark Scott, Director of Neolithic Science (a wholly owned subsidiary of Experimental Pathology, which in turn is a wholly owned subsidiary of the Dept. of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, a Division of the Albany Medical College).

This leap into the post modern era was not accomplished without resistance from some AMC Administrators. Particularly troublesome were officials within Plant Management. Speaking from the marble balcony of Taj Ma (distant relative of AMC Pathologist Dr. Ma) Hall, headquarters for Plant Management, the PM Spokesperson Ned Ander-Thal stated the official PM position: "These labs have been good for 154 years and should comfortably last until 2144..... at the very least. I mean we modernized those labs in 1987 when we put in cold running water (i.e., safety showers). Next thing you know they'll want flush toilets. Basic research should be conducted in basic environments!" In spite of this stance, other AMC officials were able to initiate the construction of the prototype laboratory of the future.

Welcome to the 21st Century AMC!
